168 PICKS · 24 FRANCHISES · SEVEN ROUNDS

THE DRAFT GETS REAL

The stars established identity. Rounds 4–7 built actual teams. Four new rounds added 96 players, exposed every manager's tolerance for injury and age, and turned roster theory into recognizable construction.

Seven rounds now separate a list of stars from a league of rosters. AI-generated editorial illustration.

Memphis buys the ceiling

Embiid and Porzingis joined Anthony Davis in a frontcourt that can dominate per game and disappear by games played.

Toronto catches the latest news

Kawhi Leonard went 4.10, then officially returned to the Raptors four days before publication.

The rookie wave keeps moving

Eighteen 2026 rookies now appear across the seven-round board, pushing several franchises toward patience.

The middle rounds did not settle the league. They revealed which risks every manager is willing to own.

NINETY-SIX PICKS CHANGE THE QUESTION

After three rounds, the question was what each team valued. After seven, the question is whether those values can survive an NBA season.

04

Stars were still available

Kawhi Leonard, James Harden, Stephen Curry, Ja Morant and De'Aaron Fox made Round 4 feel like an extension of the opening board. Managers chose role certainty, age, health or upside in radically different proportions.

05

The production shelf widened

Embiid, Michael Porter Jr., Derrick White, Mikal Bridges and OG Anunoby sat beside five rookie or near-rookie bets. The round rewarded managers willing to define a competitive window.

06

Depth became positional

Hart, Hartenstein, Nembhard, Powell, Mark Williams and Claxton supplied recognizable jobs. Six rookies and two returning veteran guards kept the round from becoming purely conservative.

07

Specialists and scenarios

Eason, Nesmith, Braun and Diabate offered category or role value. Porzingis, Lillard and Kuminga carried larger real-life questions. Late picks became arguments about context.

BOARD STATE

All 168 slots shown in the supplied seven-round board are accounted for. Rounds 4–7 contain 96 newly confirmed selections.

MEMPHIS BOUGHT THE WHOLE RANGE

Cooper Flagg and Trey Murphy III offered a young bridge. Anthony Davis, Joel Embiid and Kristaps Porzingis then pushed the roster toward the most dramatic ceiling-versus-availability bet in the league.

43.50	38	30.97	32
Joel Embiid · 2025–26 FP/G	Estimated games from supplied 2025–26 fantasy totals	Kristaps Porzingis · 2025–26 FP/G	Estimated games from supplied 2025–26 fantasy totals

THE CASE FOR IT

Per-game force is still force

Embiid's recorded 43.50 FP/G and Porzingis' 30.97 give Memphis two more paths to elite nights. In this scoring system, blocks and efficient interior scoring can swing a matchup quickly.

Mikel Brown Jr. and Maxime Raynaud matter because they keep development value on a roster otherwise asking several veteran bigs to stay available.

THE FAILURE POINT

Three health bets can correlate

Davis played an estimated 20 games in the supplied 2025–26 record, Embiid 38 and Porzingis 32. A fantasy roster can absorb one fragile star more easily than several at the same position.

The next rounds should favor dependable games, guard creation and flexible lineups. Another injured ceiling play would compound the same risk.

Memphis may own the league's most frightening healthy lineup. “Healthy” is doing essential work in that sentence.

THE RETURN MARKET ARRIVED EARLY

Rounds 4–7 turned rehabilitation timelines into draft capital. Ja Morant, Kyrie Irving and Damian Lillard now connect three IDL teams to uncertain NBA returns.

BOSTON · PICK 4.06

Morant changes teams and context

Morant recorded 34.40 FP/G in 20 games before Memphis traded him to Portland. NBA.com's comeback report says he is expected to recover from the left elbow injury, but Portland also has Lillard, Scoot Henderson and Jrue Holiday.

Boston drafted the talent. The fantasy outcome will depend on health and how Portland divides creation.

LOS ANGELES CLIPPERS · 5.06

Irving returns from a long absence

Irving missed all of 2025–26 after a torn ACL. He gives the Clippers shooting and creation if the return is clean, but the last recorded full fantasy baseline is older than most players selected near him.

LOS ANGELES CLIPPERS · 6.19

Lillard shares the Portland puzzle

Lillard also missed last season after an Achilles tear. The real-life pairing with Morant creates both playmaking potential and role ambiguity; IDL managers should separate name value from projected minutes and usage.

PRODUCTION THAT LASTED INTO THE MIDDLE

This is a historical production screen, not a ranking. It identifies rounds 4–7 players whose supplied 2025–26 record combined meaningful per-game output with a useful sample.

EIGHT MIDDLE-ROUND PRODUCTION CASES

FP/G and estimated games from supplied 2025–26 fantasy records; estimated games = total fantasy points ÷ FP/G.

Pick	Player / IDL team	FP/G	Est. games
4.10	Kawhi Leonard Toronto Raptors	48.66	65
4.02	Kevin Porter Jr. Atlanta Hawks	42.05	38
5.17	Derrick White Indiana Pacers	37.19	77
5.11	Mikal Bridges Miami Heat	33.30	82
5.23	Payton Pritchard Atlanta Hawks	33.48	79
6.22	Andrew Wiggins Oklahoma City Thunder	31.97	68
7.03	CJ McCollum Oklahoma City Thunder	31.86	76
6.01	Miles Bridges Seattle Sonics	30.92	77

VOLUME

White and Bridges supplied the floor

Derrick White's 77 estimated games and Mikal Bridges' 82 separate availability from pure per-game reputation. Their IDL teams purchased evidence as much as upside.

CEILING

Kawhi was the outlier

Leonard's 48.66 FP/G across an estimated 65 games was the strongest combination of rate and sample left after three rounds. His new Toronto context still changes the forecast.

LATE UTILITY

Veteran wings survived

Wiggins, McCollum and Miles Bridges remained available into Rounds 6 and 7 despite recorded rates above 30 FP/G. Role changes and age explain part of the discount.

REAL-LIFE MOVES REPRICE THE BOARD

The seven-round screenshot captures current NBA team labels, but roles remain fluid. The most important updates affect players selected in the middle rounds.

TORONTO · PICK 4.10

Kawhi returns to the city of his title

Toronto officially reacquired Leonard from the Clippers on September 14. The Raptors sent Brandon Ingram, Gradey Dick and draft capital in the deal. Leonard arrives after averaging 27.9 real-life points over 65 games; Scottie Barnes and Immanuel Quickley give him more established creators than a simple nostalgia story suggests.

PHOENIX

Miles Bridges changes spacing

Charlotte traded Bridges to Phoenix in July. Seattle gets a durable 30.92 FP/G wing, while the Suns' established scorers may narrow the usage range.

CHICAGO AND CHARLOTTE

Claxton and Reid switch frontcourts

The four-team July trade sent Claxton to Chicago and Reid to Charlotte. Boston and Milwaukee drafted useful centers whose minutes now depend on new ecosystems.

MINNESOTA

Kuminga gets a fresh runway

Kuminga signed with Minnesota in September. His athletic tools fit the Timberwolves, but his value still depends on a stable role rather than a change of address alone.

2026 ROOKIES

Draft capital supplies the first clue

Wagler went fifth in the NBA Draft, Brown sixth, Flemings eighth and Burries tenth. IDL prices reflect fantasy context as well as NBA order, but real draft capital remains the strongest early evidence of opportunity.

ROUNDS 4–7 SEATTLE–INDIANA

Four new picks, one concise read. Teams remain in original Round 1 order, and no capsule is a ranking.

WING ACCUMULATION

Seattle Sonics

4.01	Ace Bailey	24.89 FP/G
5.24	RJ Barrett	32.02 FP/G
6.01	Miles Bridges	30.92 FP/G
7.24	Bennedict Mathurin	26.37 FP/G

Bailey, Barrett, Miles Bridges and Mathurin put layers of scoring and athleticism around Wembanyama, Booker and Smith. The roster still needs a high-volume organizer more than another scoring wing.

VETERAN INFRASTRUCTURE

Atlanta Hawks

4.02	Kevin Porter Jr.	42.05 FP/G
5.23	Payton Pritchard	33.48 FP/G
6.02	Josh Hart	31.80 FP/G
7.23	Jusuf Nurkic	32.54 FP/G

Porter, Pritchard, Hart and Nurkic turn the Jokic-Daniels-LeBron opening into a deep present-tense roster. Hart and Pritchard add usable games; Nurkic gives Jokic insurance rather than a new identity.

FLOOR SPACING AROUND CREATION

Houston Rockets

4.03	Tyler Herro	35.55 FP/G
5.22	Keegan Murray	29.87 FP/G
6.03	Isaiah Hartenstein	30.00 FP/G
7.22	Pelle Larsson	22.63 FP/G

Herro and Keegan Murray add shooting beside Doncic and Young, while Hartenstein supplies screens and interior work. The offensive ceiling is enormous; the turnover burden remains the recurring tax.

CEILING OVER CERTAINTY

Memphis Grizzlies

4.04	Mikel Brown Jr.	Rookie / no record
5.21	Joel Embiid	43.50 FP/G
6.04	Maxime Raynaud	25.42 FP/G
7.21	Kristaps Porzingis	30.97 FP/G

Embiid and Porzingis joined Davis in the highest-risk frontcourt bet on the board. Mikel Brown and Raynaud protect the future, but weekly availability will decide whether the star names become an advantage.

TWO-WAY PRESSURE

New York Knicks

4.05	De'Aaron Fox	36.71 FP/G
5.20	Cason Wallace	24.31 FP/G
6.05	Neemias Queta	29.68 FP/G
7.20	Tari Eason	23.33 FP/G

Fox adds speed, Wallace and Eason add defensive events, and Queta adds another rim body. The additions reinforce Gilgeous-Alexander, Jackson and Bane without forcing the roster into one statistical lane.

CREATION WITH A HEALTH HINGE

Boston Celtics

4.06	Ja Morant	34.40 FP/G
5.19	Nic Claxton	30.26 FP/G
6.06	Andrew Nembhard	34.05 FP/G
7.19	Bilal Coulibaly	26.48 FP/G

Morant gives Cunningham another elite downhill creator; Claxton, Nembhard and Coulibaly add defense and connective play. Morant's recovery and crowded Portland backcourt create the widest outcome range.

PROSPECT CONCENTRATION

Orlando Magic

4.07	Collin Murray-Boyles	23.11 FP/G
5.18	Nate Ament	Rookie / no record
6.07	Brayden Burries	Rookie / no record
7.18	Tre Johnson	19.40 FP/G

Murray-Boyles, Ament, Burries and Tre Johnson place four development bets behind Edwards, Buzelis and Fears. The runway is long, but early-season production will depend heavily on Edwards.

INSURANCE FOR A RETURN

Indiana Pacers

4.08	Ivica Zubac	31.44 FP/G
5.17	Derrick White	37.19 FP/G
6.08	Paul George	35.24 FP/G
7.17	Scotty Pippen Jr.	26.30 FP/G

Zubac and White bring dependable minutes, while George and Pippen add veteran creation. The choices reduce the burden on Haliburton's comeback, though several core pieces now share the same win-now clock.

ROUNDS 4–7 SAN–DALLAS

Four new picks, one concise read. Teams remain in original Round 1 order, and no capsule is a ranking.

DEFENSE AND IMMEDIATE MINUTES

San Antonio Spurs

4.09	Rudy Gobert	33.01 FP/G
5.16	Ty Jerome	37.13 FP/G
6.09	Norman Powell	32.55 FP/G
7.16	Carter Bryant	9.17 FP/G

Gobert supplies the four-point blocks that the opening trio lacked. Jerome and Powell add proven guard production; Bryant is the lone long-horizon bet in an otherwise present-focused middle draft.

THE KAWHI PIVOT

Toronto Raptors

4.10	Kawhi Leonard	48.66 FP/G
5.15	Jalen Green	26.84 FP/G
6.10	PJ Washington	28.71 FP/G
7.15	Aaron Nesmith	23.29 FP/G

Leonard at 4.10 changed the roster's temperature immediately. Green, Washington and Nesmith add scoring and two-way depth around Barnes and Kessler, making health the central variable rather than talent.

ATHLETIC MIDDLE

Minnesota Timberwolves

4.11	Anthony Black	29.86 FP/G
5.14	Jalen Suggs	33.79 FP/G
6.11	Shaedon Sharpe	30.20 FP/G
7.14	Jonathan Kuminga	21.67 FP/G

Black, Suggs, Sharpe and Kuminga add size, defense and transition play around Johnson, Clingan and Markkanen. Half-court shooting and primary creation remain the questions.

PERIMETER COMPLETION

Golden State Warriors

4.12	Jaime Jaquez Jr.	29.81 FP/G
5.13	Brandin Podziemski	28.49 FP/G
6.12	Kingston Flemings	Rookie / no record
7.13	Collin Gillespie	29.68 FP/G

Jaquez, Podziemski, Flemings and Gillespie follow a large Sengun-Sarr-Thompson opening with guards and wings. Flemings extends the timeline; the others can stabilize roles sooner.

FRONTCOURT DEPTH

Sacramento Kings

4.13	Jarrett Allen	33.30 FP/G
5.12	Michael Porter Jr.	39.31 FP/G
6.13	Mark Williams	28.17 FP/G
7.12	Christian Braun	24.89 FP/G

Allen, Porter, Mark Williams and Braun give Sacramento rebounding, finishing and shooting around its creator-heavy opening. Two centers inside three rounds create flexibility, but also some role overlap.

RELIABLE SUPPORT

Miami Heat

4.14	Immanuel Quickley	35.49 FP/G
5.11	Mikal Bridges	33.30 FP/G
6.14	Devin Vassell	26.72 FP/G
7.11	Wendell Carter Jr.	26.64 FP/G

Quickley, Mikal Bridges, Vassell and Carter form a stable middle class around Tatum, Avdija and Okongwu. The group has fewer unknowns than most, with Tatum's workload still the major swing factor.

FULL YOUTH COMMITMENT

Brooklyn Nets

4.15	Ajay Mitchell	27.93 FP/G
5.10	Joan Beringer	10.07 FP/G
6.15	Morez Johnson Jr.	Rookie / no record
7.10	Scoot Henderson	23.80 FP/G

Ajay Mitchell, Beringer, Morez Johnson and Henderson keep Brooklyn on the youngest possible path. Edey provides an interior reference point; shooting and proven high-end creation remain future needs.

PRIME-AGE UTILITY

Dallas Mavericks

4.16	Coby White	26.12 FP/G
5.09	OG Anunoby	33.04 FP/G
6.16	Hannes Steinbach	Rookie / no record
7.09	Quentin Grimes	25.11 FP/G

White, Anunoby and Grimes bring perimeter defense and scalable offense around Giannis and Duren, while Steinbach preserves upside. The roster added useful roles without duplicating its opening stars.

ROUNDS 4–7 CHARLOTTE–DETROIT

Four new picks, one concise read. Teams remain in original Round 1 order, and no capsule is a ranking.

DEVELOPMENT AND DEFENSE

Charlotte - NZT

4.17	Reed Sheppard	29.73 FP/G
5.08	Peyton Watson	28.74 FP/G
6.17	Allen Graves	Rookie / no record
7.08	Moussa Diabate	25.95 FP/G

Sheppard, Watson, Graves and Diabate extend Charlotte's young timeline. The group can produce steals, blocks and athletic plays, but established scoring remains scarce beyond the opening trio.

TWO CLOCKS AT ONCE

Los Angeles Clippers

4.19	Keaton Wagler	Rookie / no record
5.06	Kyrie Irving	Rookie / no record
6.19	Damian Lillard	Rookie / no record
7.06	Karim Lopez	Rookie / no record

Wagler and Lopez are rookie bets; Irving and Lillard are veteran comeback bets. Around Mitchell, Jalen Williams and Ware, the roster can be dangerous, but its middle rounds carry unusually little certainty.

VETERAN FIT

Chicago Bulls

4.21	Brandon Ingram	35.61 FP/G
5.04	Myles Turner	27.42 FP/G
6.21	Julian Champagnie	24.23 FP/G
7.04	Sandro Mamukelashvili	24.75 FP/G

Ingram, Turner, Champagnie and Mamukelashvili add scoring and frontcourt spacing to Holmgren, Brunson and Garland. Turner's blocks fit the scoring system; the rest of the group reduces offensive pressure on the guards.

A BRIDGE BETWEEN ERAS

Milwaukee Bucks

4.23	Stephen Curry	42.93 FP/G
5.02	Naz Reid	29.60 FP/G
6.23	Aday Mara	Rookie / no record
7.02	Cameron Carr	Rookie / no record

Curry gives Miller and Wilson an elite veteran reference point, while Reid adds prime-age stability and Mara and Carr extend the future. The construction asks one roster to serve two timelines.

PROSPECTS ALL THE WAY DOWN

Los Angeles Lakers

4.18	Egor Demin	21.79 FP/G
5.07	Khaman Maluach	8.46 FP/G
6.18	Jaylon Tyson	26.20 FP/G
7.07	Sergio De Larrea	Rookie / no record

Demin, Maluach, Tyson and De Larrea continue the bet that began with Peterson and Acuff. Banchero is the only established NBA engine, so patience is part of the construction rather than a side effect.

VERSATILE WINGS

Cleveland Cavaliers

4.20	Toumani Camara	27.11 FP/G
5.05	Yaxel Lendeborg	Rookie / no record
6.20	John Collins	26.35 FP/G
7.05	Cameron Johnson	25.06 FP/G

Camara, Lendeborg, Collins and Cameron Johnson add switchable size and shooting around Ball, Randle and Murray. The build gained lineup options more than one specialist strength.

THE PRESENT, REINFORCED

Oklahoma City Thunder

4.22	James Harden	43.50 FP/G
5.03	Dejounte Murray	36.00 FP/G
6.22	Andrew Wiggins	31.97 FP/G
7.03	CJ McCollum	31.86 FP/G

Harden, Dejounte Murray, Wiggins and McCollum join Towns, Durant and Adebayo in the clearest veteran push. The roster has immediate production across seven slots and the oldest collective clock.

PRIME-AGE DEPTH

Detroit Pistons

4.24	Kyshawn George	31.23 FP/G
5.01	Ayo Dosunmu	28.97 FP/G
6.24	Saddiq Bey	30.67 FP/G
7.01	Day'Ron Sharpe	23.15 FP/G

Kyshawn George, Dosunmu, Bey and Sharpe add playable years around Mobley, Dybantsa and Wagner. Detroit kept its young core intact while adding enough established roles to avoid a purely developmental roster.

THE SECOND ROOKIE WAVE ARRIVES

The first three rounds captured the elite rookie names. Rounds 4–7 brought the class's second layer and made development timelines visible across the league.

DRAFT CAPITAL

Wagler, Brown and Flemings lead the group

Keaton Wagler was the fifth selection in the 2026 NBA Draft, Mikel Brown Jr. went sixth and Kingston Flemings eighth. Those NBA investments create opportunity, but not guaranteed fantasy usage.

Brayden Burries, Morez Johnson Jr. and Aday Mara were also first-round NBA selections. In a 24-team dynasty league, their development value can justify patience that redraft formats cannot.

SCORING FIT

Defensive events can accelerate value

Bigs such as Mara, Steinbach, Lopez and Beringer have a path through rebounds and four-point blocks. Guards must create efficiently because every turnover removes two points.

The important question is not which rookie has the loudest name. It is whose NBA role can produce the categories this scoring system pays most.

ROOKIES SELECTED IN ROUNDS 4–7

Confirmed IDL selections with no positive 2025–26 NBA fantasy record in the supplied files.

Pick	Player	IDL team
4.04	Mikel Brown Jr.	Memphis Grizzlies
4.19	Keaton Wagler	Los Angeles Clippers

HOW THIS ISSUE WAS REPORTED

LEAGUE EVIDENCE

The board is the authority

The user-supplied seven-round screenshot establishes the 168 IDL selections. Rounds 1–3 were checked against the confirmed Issue No. 1 ledger; rounds 4–7 were transcribed from the new board. Current team spelling, including Charlotte - NZT, follows the latest image.

Historical FP/G and total fantasy points come from the supplied 2023–24, 2024–25 and 2025–26 exports. Estimated games equal total fantasy points divided by FP/G and are labeled as estimates.

No power ranking or dynasty ranking appears in this issue.

EDITORIAL STANDARD

Facts, analysis and forecasts remain separate. A player's NBA move changes context, not IDL ownership. Historical production describes what happened; it does not guarantee the next season.
